AGAINST SIMON

Defense Begins Case and Brings Out Hotly Contested Point, After Much Wrangling and Crossfire of Questions.

Witness McConkey Tells Attorney Rowe It Is None of His Business How Bill Was Paid, but Later Answers.

When the trial of Health Commissioner Simon before Mayor Wells, on charges of neglect of duty, was resumed Monday morning, the city having closed its case last Thursday, Attorney Thomas J. Rowe, for the defense, moved that the entire proceedings be dismissed, for the reason that all the material witnesses against Dr. Simon are city employees, "and therefore subservient to the Mayor," and because they had failed to substantiate the charges against the Health Commissioner.

This motion was overruled by the Mayor.

Mr. Rowe then moved that the entire testimony of Dr. Snodgrass, city bacteriologist, be stricken from the records, since there was no specific charge that Dr. Simon had neglected that department.

The Mayor overruled this motion on the ground that there was a general charge that Dr. Simon had neglected all departments.

Mr. Rowe's third motion was to dismiss the charge that Dr. Simon had exceeded his authority in discharging Miss Elizabeth Rowan, for 11 years chief clerk at the City Hospital.

This point was conceded by City Counselor Bates, and the motion was granted by Mayor Wells.

By agreement between the lawyers it was arranged that Dr. Simon will not be required to produce witnesses to prove that he attended 28 meetings of the Board of Health between April 15, 1904, and April 15, 1905, and that he was only following a custom of eight years' standing when he placed the names of employees on the payroll before their appointments were confirmed. The city concedes these points.

48 Witnesses Called.

Forty-eight witnesses have been subpoenaed by Dr. Simon.

The first witness called was James G. McConkey, private secretary to Mayor Wells, who filed the charges on which Simon is now being tried.

"When did you commence investigating Dr. Simon's office?" asked Attorney Rowe.

"Nine months or a year ago," said McConkey.

"On what did you base your investigation?" he was asked.

"On verbal complaints made in the Mayor's office," was the answer.

"Were there any written complaints?"

"No, sir."

"Who made these verbal complaints?"

"I don't remember."

"Not one name?"

"No, sir."

Lawyer as Detective.

"Did you employ detectives to obtain evidence against Dr. Simon?" asked Mr. Rowe.

"I can't see that that is material," said McConkey. "No evidence has been introduced on that point."

"That is not for you to decide," said Rowe. "It is for you to answer the question."

City Counselor Bates said he had no objection to the witness answering the question, but Mayor Wells said:

There is no immediate prospect of relief from the hot weather which is prevailing in St. Louis.

The city, according to the Weather Bureau, is in for a hot spell. It is intended that the length of time that it may continue cannot be foretold beyond the next 24 hours.

No change for the better is in prospect within that time and the maximum temperature will be 95 to 96.

The humidity is 75 per cent, which Weather Forecasters says is moderately high. The indications are that it will be lower during the day.

The weather affects persons in proportion to the height of the humidity. Eighty per cent is considered a dangerous degree of humidity.

Physicians at the city institutions say that private cases may be expected if care is not taken. They caution against over-exertion and against indulgence in alcoholic.

The official forecast is: "Fair and continued warm tonight and Tuesday; light southerly winds."

The warm weather extends over practically all of the country east of the Rocky Mountains.

Along the northern border and in the New England States it is moderately cool.

In the entire country there has been no heavy rain during the past 24 hours.

Light showers have fallen in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida, along the Canadian border and in the New England States.

Sunday St. Louis was not so warm as some other cities. The highest here was 92. In Chicago the highest temperature was 94; in Omaha, 96; in Sioux City, 100 and in Springfield, Ill., 92, the same as here.

FIVE WITNESSES
SWELTER IN JAIL;
CRIME CONFESSED

Story of Mrs. Carder, Who Held the Revolver, of Accidental Shooting Is Substantiated by Most Witnesses.

MISS BARNES DIES IN
EFFORT TO SAVE LOVER

Woman Who Caused Death Raves in Hospital as Result of a Tragedy Brought About by Quarrel Over Rent.

One girl and five men are sweltering in cells at Dayton Street Police Station, held as witnesses to the tragedy of Sunday afternoon, in which Mrs. Mary Carder admitted holding the revolver that killed Bessie Barnes at 202 Lucas avenue, but says that it was accidentally discharged, which story is substantiated by most of the witnesses.

The girl is Lillie Bauman, employed by the Carders as a nurse. The men are Jesse Carder, husband of the woman; Morris Roth, sweetheart of the dead girl; Earl Barnes, her brother; George Orchard, her brother-in-law, and Frank Leahy. All of these saw the shooting.

These are part of a large number arrested immediately following the tragedy. The police patrol wagon carried about every person found in the three houses of Mrs. Barnes to the Dayton street court, but most of them were subsequently released.

Explaining his action in arresting so many, Sheriff Lancaster said:

"I directed the arrest of everyone found in the house for the reason that all were so excited that it could not be told who were witnesses and who were not. I took them all in custody to be examined when they were able to tell a straight story. We often do this."

The coroner's inquest will probably be held Tuesday morning.

Lying weak and wan at the City Hospital, with the hysteria of the night before passed, Mrs. Mary Carder, a bullet from whose pistol killed Bessie Barnes, while the girl was endeavoring to protect her sweetheart, told a Post-Dispatch reporter her story of the tragedy.

The shooting was an accident, Mrs. Carder declares, brought on by the girl herself.

Ordered All Arrested.

"I directed the arrest of everyone found in the house for the reason that all were so excited that it could not be told who were witnesses and who were not. I took them all in custody to be examined when they were able to tell a straight story. We often do this."

The coroner's inquest will probably be held Tuesday morning.

Lying weak and wan at the City Hospital, with the hysteria of the night before passed, Mrs. Mary Carder, a bullet from whose pistol killed Bessie Barnes, while the girl was endeavoring to protect her sweetheart, told a Post-Dispatch reporter her story of the tragedy.

The shooting was an accident, Mrs. Carder declares, brought on by the girl herself.

Killed Only One She Liked.

Mrs. Carder says that Bessie was the only one in the house whom she really liked, that she had felt toward the girl as a mother toward a daughter.

Trouble first began, Mrs. Carder said, last week when a dog owned by Mrs. Barnes came into their apartments and killed a guinea pig belonging to the children. She locked the dog in her kitchen then, she said, until it was taken away by one of the Barnes family.

Saturday, she said, Mrs. Barnes had threatened to slap her because of remarks she was alleged to have made to a neighbor concerning Mrs. Barnes. That same afternoon, she said, she sent Lillie Bauman, employed as a nurse, across the street to a grocery.

When the girl returned, she said, she was prevented from entering the house by boarders of Mrs. Barnes, who sat on the steps and blocked the way.

Intended to Move.

The husband is Jesse Carder, secretary of the Teamsters' Union, No. 76. He had intended to move from the house, which was rented of Mrs. Barnes, his wife said, within two weeks. They had delayed only because he would not be able to pay the rent until then. However, after the incident of Saturday, she said, her husband notified Mrs. Barnes and prepared to move at once.

Later in the afternoon, she said, Miss Ola Orchard, Mrs. Barnes' niece, Mrs. Barnes, Morris Roth of 2021 Lawton avenue, and others were on the porch together and there was discussion of the Carder family's intention to move on the following day and their right to remove the furniture.

Quarrel Over Desk.

Morris Roth declared then that Carder should not be allowed to take a certain desk from the house. This is the desk, which Carder says, contains the records of his union.

"I'd kill him before I'd let him take that away," Mrs. Carder says Roth declared. Then, she said, she alleges, that he promised to be on hand himself and to have some of his friends there to see that it was not taken away.

Then she told of running downstairs, seeing her husband in danger and returning to get the revolver, which, Mrs. Carder says, was discharged in a struggle with Bessie, who came upon her from behind.

At the morgue on the third and first two fingers of the dead girl are powder stains showing that she had strangled Morris Roth when arrested, said that Mrs. Carder had aimed at Bessie Barnes and had fired deliberately.

COURT DISSOLVES
LEWIS RECEIVERSHIP;
BLAMES SWANGER

Sustaining Motion of Postal Bank Attorneys, Judge McElhinney Says Secretary of State Didn't Investigate Institution, but Acted on Suspicion Only.

RECEIVER RETURNS BANK
CONTROL TO LEWIS

Fraud Order, Says Court, Is Hindrance to Business, but Doesn't Make Concern Insolvent, or Jeopardize Safety of Deposits.

Judge McElhinney of the St. Louis County Circuit Court ordered the dissolution Monday of the receivership of E. G. Lewis' People's United States Bank and directed the receiver, former Judge Selden P. Spencer, to make at once a report to the court of the assets of the bank in his possession and of his acts since appointment.

Notice of the court's decision was taken at once to Judge Spencer by Sheriff Herpel.

Judge Spencer immediately notified Lewis of the court's action, surrendered the bank to him and left the banking room. He remained about the Woman's Magazine Building, however, attending to other business.

By his decision Judge McElhinney sustained the motion of the attorneys for Lewis, filed and argued last week. He revoked the order he issued a week ago, under which Judge Spencer was appointed receiver.

In announcing his decision from the bench at the opening of court, he stated merely that he was without jurisdiction.

COST TO STATE UNDETERMINED.

Receiver Spencer refused to discuss in any way the court's action, or to say whether he was surprised. He was asked what the cost of the receivership, which the State will have to pay, would be, and said he did not know. One item in this cost is $5000 for the $1,000,000 surety which Judge Spencer gave as surety.

Judge Spencer said he would immediately make an accounting to the court.

Lewis refused to say what action he would take as a result of regaining possession of the bank. When asked for a statement, he replied with a justification of his case thus far.

THE COURT'S OPINION.

Following is the opinion of Judge McElhinney: "This suit is for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the defendant's bank and wind up its affairs. The order of appointment requires a receiver to take charge of the bank and to take possession of and preserve its assets."

"The petition does not state a case for this remedy upon common-law grounds. In it the statutory authority of the Secretary of State over the bank is referred to, and the general purport and object is to state a cause of action under section 1305 of this statute."

"It is stated and admitted in the argument that the purpose is to ask the relief on the grounds specified in the first part of section 1305 and the authority there given. It also appears from the allegations in the petition, charging certain alleged mismanagement of the affairs of the bank, that the Secretary of State has officially required certain changes to be made in such management; that his requirements have not been complied with; and that he has discovered that the bank is still conducting its business in an unsafe and unauthorized manner, and it is inexpedient for it to continue to transact business; and has so reported officially to the Attorney-General."

SUMMARY ACTION UNAUTHORIZED.

"To remedy these matters, the Secretary of State is authorized to make such report to the Attorney-General, who shall thereupon institute such proceedings as the nature of the case may require. This part of the section specifies, to some extent, the nature of the relief which may be granted; but does not authorize the summary appointment of a receiver without notice to the bank or an opportunity for a hearing."

"The petition contains allegations that the continuance of the bank in business would seriously jeopardize the safety of its depositors and stockholders, and that the Secretary of State has discovered this and so reported to the Attorney-General. This would seem to be an attempt to bring the case under the second part of the section, which requires the court to judge in vacation summarily to appoint a receiver, and hear the objections afterwards in open court."

CONDITIONS NOT MET.

"But this part of the section requires something more as a condition for such appointment. There must be an examination of the bank by the Secretary or an examiner, and a report or recommendation that the bank should be closed. The Secretary must thereupon close the bank and take charge of its property and make a thorough examination of its affairs; and upon such thorough examination if he shall be satisfied that the bank cannot resume business or liquidate its indebtedness thereupon he shall report the fact of insolvency to the Attorney-General, who shall apply to the court for appointment of a receiver. In such case, it is made the duty of the court summarily to appoint said receiver, and to subsequently hear the complaint or opposition of the bank or its officers in open court. There are no averments of these matters, and no evidence that they exist."

"The application was presented as one coming under this mandatory requirement of the second part of the section. But upon more careful consideration of the statute and the petition, after argument of counsel, the Court is satisfied that such is not the case, and that the appointment summarily made, without notice, was without authority or jurisdiction."

"The alleged 'fraud order' may be a serious hindrance to the business of the bank, and may necessitate a change in its business methods, but does not render the bank insolvent or seriously jeopardize the safety of its depositors or other indebtedness."

SWANGER DIDN'T INVESTIGATE.

After rendering the decision he said to a Post-Dispatch reporter: "I revoked the receivership order chiefly on the ground that no state insolvency had been shown to exist in the bank and that Secretary of State Swanger had not even taken charge to ascertain whether its condition was unsafe."

"These facts, coupled with the fact that the Secretary of State had acted merely on his own suspicions, without personal knowledge of the facts, led me to sustain the contention of the bank."

"It is plainly the intention of the law that the Secretary of State should assume charge of the bank and ascertain its condition before asking for a receiver."

"The fact that no notice was served on Lewis in the receivership proceedings is also weight with me in reaching the decision."

An application for a receiver was irregular. This was the decisive fact."

DETECTIVE PAID

AGAINST SIMON

Defense Begins Case and Brings Out Hotly Contested Point, After Much Wrangling and Crossfire of Questions.

SERVICES REMUNERATED
FROM CONTINGENT FUND

Witness McConkey Tells Attorney Rowe It Is None of His Business How Bill Was Paid, but Later Answers.

When the trial of Health Commissioner Simon before Mayor Wells, on charges of neglect of duty, was resumed Monday morning, the city having closed its case last Thursday, Attorney Thomas J. Rowe, for the defense, moved that the entire proceedings be dismissed for the reason that all the material witnesses against Dr. Simon are city employees, "and therefore subservient to the Mayor," and because they had failed to substantiate the charges against the Health Commissioner.

This motion was overruled by the Mayor.

Mr. Rowe then moved that the entire testimony of Dr. Snodgrass, city bacteriologist, be stricken from the records, since there was no specific charge that Dr. Simon had neglected that department.

The Mayor overruled this motion on the ground that there was a general charge that Dr. Simon had neglected all departments.

Mr. Rowe's third motion was to disallow the charge that Dr. Simon had exceeded his authority in discharging Miss Elizabeth Rowan, for 11 years chief clerk at the City Hospital.

This point was conceded by City Counselor Bates, and the motion was granted by Mayor Wells.

By agreement between the lawyers it was arranged that Dr. Simon will not be required to produce witnesses to prove that he attended 33 meetings of the Board of Health between April 15, 1904, and April 15, 1905, and that he was only following a custom of eight years' standing when he placed the names of employees on the payroll, before their appointments were confirmed. The city concedes these points.

48 Witnesses Called.

Forty-eight witnesses have been subpoenaed by Dr. Simon.

The first witness called was James G. McConkey, private secretary to Mayor Wells, who filed the charges on which Simon is now being tried.

"When did you commence investigating Dr. Simon's office?" asked Attorney Rowe.

"Nine months or a year ago," said McConkey.

"On what did you base your investigation?" he was asked.

"On verbal complaints made in the Mayor's office," was the answer.

"Were there any written complaints?"

"No, sir."

"Who made these verbal complaints?"

"I don't remember."

"Not one name?"

"No, sir."

Lawyer as Detective.

"Did you employ detectives to obtain evidence against Dr. Simon?" asked Mr. Rowe.

"I can't see that that is material," said McConkey. "No evidence has been introduced on that point."

"That is not for you to decide," said Rowe. "It is for you to answer the question."

City Counselor Bates said he had no objection to the witness answering the question, but Mayor Wells said:

"There have been too many personalities in this case, both inside and outside the court. Even if detectives were employed, it was nobody's business."

However, McConkey answered the question.

"I employed W. H. Trigg, a lawyer, in whom I have great confidence," he said.

"How did you pay him?" asked Rowe. "By personal check," said McConkey.

"What was the amount?"

"None of your business," answered McConkey, sharply.

"Your Honor, I consider the answer exceedingly impertinent," said Rowe, addressing Mayor Wells.

"Witness need not answer the question," said the Mayor.

"Were you ever reimbursed for the amount paid?"

"Yes, sir."

"How?"

"It was taken out of the Mayor's contingent fund."

"Is the Mayor's contingent fund used for such purposes regularly?" asked Rowe.

"Yes, sir."

"Have you control of that fund?"

"I use it whenever necessary and then make a report to the Mayor."

"When was the last such report made by you?"

"About nine months ago."

Mayor Not Told Directly.

"Had the Mayor any knowledge that a man had been employed by you to get information concerning Dr. Simon?"

"No direct knowledge," said McConkey.

SENATOR CLARK
OUT OF DANGER

Young Wife in Paris Told by Cable Husband Is Recovering From Operation.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Senator W. A. Clark, who is recovering from an operation on an abscess in the ear, passed a comfortable night, and the indications this morning are very favorable.

Dr. James F. McKernon called on the Senator at 8:45, remaining half an hour.

Senator Clark's secretary said this morning the Senator awoke in good spirits and expressed himself as grateful at the result of the operation, and that he was feeling so well following such a grave condition.

So serious was the operation upon Senator Clark considered that extraordinary precautions were taken to make it a complete success.

In response to a dispatch Dr. Thomas L. Benitt, a specialist in anaesthesia, came to this city from his country home at Craigville, Mass., and administered the anaesthetic. He was assisted by Dr. W. B. Madison, his assistant, who has remained near the sick chamber ever since.

The Senator's young wife, who is in Paris, was advised of the exact condition of the Senator in a cablegram sent Sunday by the Senator's private secretary. It was not then expected that any change would be made in Mrs. Clark's plans abroad or that she would leave before next Friday.

Senator Clark's secretary said this afternoon that the patient had continued to improve during the day and that his condition was so satisfactory that his son-in-law, Dr. Louis R. Morris, who had been at his bedside since the operation, left the city for his country home, assured of his father-in-law's recovery.

REGRETTED SHOOTING WIFE.

After Writing Note Making Admission Husband Suicides.

SPECIAL TO THE POST-DISPATCH.

TEXARKANA, Ark., July 17.—Ches Reynolds is dead. He is the young New Yorker who shot his bride here six weeks ago in a fit of jealousy. Last night he wrote a note stating that he regretted having done so, and going to the altar at the rear of the hotel in which she is staying, shot himself through the right temple.

He was dead when found. Mrs. Reynolds will recover.

CORPSE GREETS UNDERTAKER

SPECIAL TO THE POST-DISPATCH.

MAYSVILLE, Ky., July 17.—Toney Marshall is in jail here.

He lives several miles from this city. He came to town and, going to Undertaker Coughlin, told him to go out to his home and prepare his mother for burial, saying he wished her body embalmed. He then asked Mr. Coughlin to allow him the use of a horse and buggy for a few hours, as he desired to notify some relatives in the country. This Mr. Coughlin did.

After Marshall had started the undertaker loaded his paraphernalia in a wagon and drove out to Marshall's home. There he found the old lady out in the garden pulling weeds.

It developed that Marshall desired to attend a picnic in the country that night and was without means sufficient to hire a buggy.

ARTON, OF PANAMA
SCANDAL, IS DEAD

Frenchman Who Was Imprisoned and Pardoned May Have Killed Himself.

PARIS, July 17.—Emile Artion, one of the principal figures in the old Panama Canal scandal, was found dead in his apartment this morning under circumstances indicating suicide.

Artion was sentenced in 1906 to eight years' imprisonment for conspiracy with Baron de Reinach and Dr. Cornelius Herz in the frauds of the Panama Canal.

Artion was the intermediary between Baron de Reinach and the incriminated French deputies, that is, between the baron and the bribed and incriminated French deputies.

Baron de Reinach and the incriminated French deputies were the guilty of about 160 millions. He alone possessed the secrets of the bribery.

When the crash came in 1902 Artion fled, and with him went about $750,000 of the funds of the French Dynamite Society, with which Artion was associated. In his absence he was sentenced on the charge of trying to bribe Artion to five years' imprisonment and to 20 years' imprisonment for his connection with the French Dynamite Society. Artion was finally captured in London and taken to France, but was pardoned in 1905.

De Reinach committed suicide and Dr. Herz, after seeking refuge in England, fled there in 1905.

QUARREL OVER DECK.

Morris Roth declared that Carder should not be allowed to take a certain deck from the house. This is the deck, which Carder says, contains the records of his union.

"I'd kill him before I'd let him take that away," Mrs. Carder says Roth declared. Then, he said, she alleges, that he promised to be on hand himself and to have some of his friends there to see that it was not taken away.

Then she told of running downstairs, seeing her husband in danger and rushing to get the revolver, which she says, was discharged in a struggle with Bessie, who came upon her from behind.

At the morgue, on the thumb and first two fingers of the dead girl are power stances showing that she had grasped the barrel of the revolver.

Morris Roth, when arrested, said that Mrs. Carder had aimed at Bessie Barnes and had fired deliberately.

FIVE WITNESSES
SWELTER IN JAIL;
CRIME CONFESSED

Story of Mrs. Carder, Who Held the Revolver, of Accidental Shooting Is Substantiated by Most Witnesses.

MISS BARNES DIES IN
EFFORT TO SAVE LOVER

Woman Who Caused Death Raves in Hospital as Result of a Tragedy Brought About by Quarrel Over Rent.

One girl and five men are sweltering in cells at Dayton Street Police Station, held as witnesses to the tragedy of Sunday afternoon, in which Mrs. Mary Carder admits holding the revolver that killed Bessie Barnes at 202 Lucas avenue, but says that it was accidentally discharged, which story is substantiated by most of the witnesses.

The girl is Lillie Baumer, employed by the Carders, as a nurse. The men are Jesse Carder, husband of the woman; Morris Roth, sweetheart of the dead girl; Earl Barnes, her brother; George Orchard, her brother-in-law, and Frank Leahy. All of these saw the shooting.

These are part of a large number arrested immediately following the tragedy. The police patrol wagon carried about every person found in the three houses of Mrs. Barnes to the Dayton street court, but most of them were subsequently released.

Explaining his action in arresting so many, Sergt. Lancaster said:

"I directed the arrest of everyone found in the house for the reason that all were so excited that it could not be told who were witnesses and who were not. I took them all in custody to be examined when they were able to tell a straight story. We often do this."

The coroner's inquest will probably be held Tuesday morning.

Lying weak and wan at the City Hospital, with the hysteria of the night before passed, Mrs. Carder, a "bully" from whose pistol killed Bessie Barnes, while the girl was endeavoring to protect her sweetheart, told a Post-Dispatch reporter her story of the tragedy.

The shooting was an accident, Mrs. Carder declares, brought on by Mrs. Leahy.

Killed Only One She Liked.

Mrs. Carder says that Bessie was the only one in the house whom she really liked, that she had felt toward the girl as a mother toward a daughter.

Trouble first began, Mrs. Carder said, last week when a dog owned by Mrs. Barnes came into their apartments and killed a guinea pig belonging to the children. She looked the dog in her kitchen then, she said, until it was taken away by one of the Barnes family.

Saturday, she said, Mrs. Barnes had threatened to slap her because of remarks she was alleged to have made to a neighbor concerning Mrs. Barnes. That same afternoon, she said, she sent Lillie Baumer, employed as a nurse, across the street to a grocery.

When the girl returned, she said, she was prevented from entering the house by boarders of Mrs. Barnes, who sat on the steps and blocked the way.

Intended to Move.

The husband is Jesse Carder, secretary of the Teamsters' Union, No. 764. He had intended to move from the house, which was owned by Mrs. Barnes, his wife said, within two weeks. They had delayed only because he would not be able to pay the rent until then. However, after the incident of Saturday, she said, her husband notified Mrs. Barnes and prepared to move at once.

Later in the afternoon, she said, Miss Ola Orchard, Mrs. Barnes, Bessie Barnes, Morris Roth of 3011 Lawton avenue, and others were on the porch together and there was discussion of the Carder family's intention to move on the following day and their right to remove the furniture.

Quarrel Over Deck.

Morris Roth declared that Carder should not be allowed to take a certain deck from the house. This is the deck, which Carder says, contains the records of his union.

"I'd kill him before I'd let him take that away," Mrs. Carder says Roth declared. Then, he said, she alleges, that he promised to be on hand himself and to have some of his friends there to see that it was not taken away.

Then she told of running downstairs, seeing her husband in danger and rushing to get the revolver, which she says, was discharged in a struggle with Bessie, who came upon her from behind.

At the morgue, on the thumb and first two fingers of the dead girl are power stances showing that she had grasped the barrel of the revolver.

Morris Roth, when arrested, said that Mrs. Carder had aimed at Bessie Barnes and had fired deliberately.

COURT DISSOLVES
LEWIS RECEIVERSHIP;
BLAMES SWANGER

Sustaining Motion of Postal Bank Attorneys, Judge McElhinney Says Secretary of State Didn't Investigate Institution, but Acted on Suspicion Only.

RECEIVER RETURNS BANK
CONTROL TO LEWIS

Fraud Order, Says Court, Is Hindrance to Business, but Doesn't Make Concern Insolvent, or Jeopardize Safety of Deposits.

Judge McElhinney of the St. Louis County Circuit Court ordered the dissolution Monday of the receivership of E. G. Lewis' People's United States Bank and directed the receiver, former Judge Selden P. Spencer, to make at once a report to the court of the assets of the bank in his possession and of his acts since appointment.

Notice of the court's decision was taken at once to Judge Spencer by Sheriff Herpel.

Judge Spencer immediately notified Lewis of the court's action, surrendered the bank to him and left the banking room. He remained about the Woman's Magazine Building, however, attending to other business.

By his decision Judge McElhinney sustained the motion of the attorneys for Lewis, filed and argued last week. He revoked the order he issued a week ago, under which Judge Spencer was appointed receiver.

In announcing his decision from the bench at the opening of court, he stated merely that he was without jurisdiction.

COST TO STATE UNDETERMINED.

Receiver Spencer refused to discuss in any way the court's action, or to say whether he was surprised. He was asked what the cost of the receivership, which the State will have to pay, would be, and said he did not know. One item in this cost is $5000 for the $1,000,000 surety which Judge Spencer gave as surety.

Judge Spencer said he would immediately make an accounting to the court.

Lewis refused to say what action he would take as a result of regaining possession of the bank. When asked for a statement, he replied with a justification of his case thus far.

THE COURT'S OPINION.

Following is the opinion of Judge McElhinney:

"This suit is for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the defendant's bank and wind up its affairs. The order of appointment requires a receiver to take charge of the bank and to take possession of and preserve its assets."

"The petition does not state a case for this remedy upon common-law grounds. In it the statutory authority of the Secretary of State over the bank is referred to, and the general purport and object is to state a cause of action under section 1305 of this statute."

HOIST LID IN BOTH CITY AND COUNTY

Three Arrests in St. Louis and Information Filed of Violations in County.

A. J. Sores, a deputy of Sheriff Hergel of St. Louis County, found two of the numerous places in the county where liquor was dispensed Sunday in violation of the Sunday closing law fostered by Gov. Folk.

Deputy Sheriff Sores appeared at the Circuit Court in Clayton Monday and filed information against Marcus Bernheimer of Meramec Highlands. Sores averred that all kinds of liquid refreshments were dispensed at the county resort without any attempt at secrecy.

He also filed information against Louis Obert of West End Heights and three bartenders he alleges were in charge of the bar at the Belmont Club, which is one of the features at the West End Heights. The bartenders are George Miller, William Eberly and Charles W. Shaw.

Sunday afternoon's temperature was high and a great quantity of beer was sold and drunk in St. Louis County, in violation of the law, but, at that, the lid was not lifted as high as on the few Sundays preceding. The conviction of Robert Smith in Circuit Court at Clayton had a decided effect on the saloons in the neighborhood of Delmar Garden, where Smith's place is located, and some effect, apparently, in other parts of the county.

Not only were drinks unobtainable in the garden itself, but all the surrounding saloons were not doing business. At Moriche's Grove, a few squares north on the Suburban tracks, the same large business as of other Sundays was done. At Meramec Highlands, Suburban Garden, Bartold's Grove, Cheve Coeur Lake and West End Heights liquors were sold.

At Cheve Coeur William Wipke has built a saloon out in the lake and many boatloads were rowed to his life-saving station during the day.

The Belmont "club," with its 25-cent initiation fee, satisfied the thirsts of all comers at West End Heights. Some toker registered as Joseph W. Folk during the day.

Maplewood, for the first time since the Sunday closing law went into effect, witnessed a violation of the law. N. A. Nahm, keeper of a saloon on Woodlawn avenue, sold drinks to all applicants. Maplewood, for the first time since the law went into effect, witnessed a violation of the law. N. A. Nahm, keeper of a saloon on Woodlawn avenue, sold drinks to all applicants. Many residents were angered by the action of the saloon keeper and say they will endeavor to prevent its repetition.

In the city three arrests for alleged violations of the Sunday law were made. Charles Medar, saloon keeper at 1901 Dodder street; James Pizzardi of 2301 Market street, and Phillip Schaub, bartender at 300 Elm street, were taken in by the police.

Summer Complaints.

The diseases of summer are numerous and can only be avoided by careful attention to diet, and the regular and judicious use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Hot, sultry days and breathless nights are now at hand, and thousands of men, women and children are suffering from the exhausting heat. Doctors everywhere are alarmed at the unusually large number of deaths from diarrhea, dysentery, cholera morbus, cholera, typhoid and other fevers due to impure water, the consumption of unripe fruit and vegetables, and other causes.

In the treatment and cure of these summer complaints it has been shown by medical science that the only sure remedy lies in the regular and judicious use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, which drives the poisonous germs from the system, renews and builds up the wasted nerves and tissues, enriches the impoverished blood and gives new strength and vitality to every organ of the body.

Is a form of food already digested, as it agrees with the most delicate stomach. It makes the old young and the young strong. Duffy's is an absolutely pure distillation of malt without fuel oil, and is the only whiskey recognized by the Government as medicine.

CAUTION.—When you ask for Duffy's be sure you get the genuine. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and be certain that over the cork is unbroken. All druggists and grocers, or direct, $1.00 a bottle. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

$500 FOR AN IDEA TO BRING ST. LOUIS A MILLION POPULATION

Post-Dispatch Prize Contest Remains Open Until September 1—Make Your Plan Practical and Effective—Read the Conditions.

St. Louis needs a million population. Send to the Million Population Editor of the Post-Dispatch a practical plan for increasing the city's population to that figure and you may get $500.

The Post-Dispatch offers that prize subject to the award of a subcommittee of the Million Population Club's Executive Committee.

The plan must be practical, must be feasible, covering the ways and means of carrying out the suggestion of the writer.

This contest was begun in March, to close July 1, but, while great interest was shown and many letters received, there is no limit on the number of suggestions, and the number of words in each letter, but brevity will be considered as one of the elements by the Committee on Award.

The contest will close on Sept. 1, 1905.

Conditions of Contest.

THE Post-Dispatch removes its offer of a prize of $500 for the best practical suggestion of ways and means to increase the population of St. Louis to one million or more.

Write as many letters as you wish and address them to the Million Population Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Confine each letter to one suggestion and give a practical plan for carrying out that suggestion.

There is no limit on the number of words in each letter, but brevity will be considered as one of the elements by the Committee on Award.

The contest will close on Sept. 1, 1905.

Advise the City of St. Louis.

"Give St. Louis a new charter."

Why? Containing what?

"Reduce taxes on sales, merchandise and machinery."

Why? To what extent? What equals are there?

"Develop Belt Line factory sites."

How?

"Direct immigration to St. Louis."

How?

Perhaps you have a better idea than any of these, than any that have been offered. Send it in, but be sure to explain how it can be effectively and practically applied.

One suggestion in each letter, but write as many letters as you please. Make them as brief as you can, consistent with a full explanation of your scheme.

Million Club Committee's Report on Post-Dispatch Million Population Prize

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The undersigned, members of the Executive Committee, have examined the letters submitted for the prize of $500 offered by the Post-Dispatch for "the best suggestion of Ways and Means" to achieve a population of one million.

The committee is impressed with the widespread interest manifested and with the evident thought, bestowed upon the subject by the hundreds of writers.

Not only has the competition brought out many excellent suggestions, but it reveals an active public sentiment for the betterment of St. Louis, in material, esthetic and moral senses, worthy of commendation.

The members of the committee, after four meetings, have reached the conclusion that the award should not be made at this time; that the competition should be open until Sept. 1. One reason which prompts this conclusion is that many contestants who have participated in good faith have departed somewhat from the conditions of the contest as laid down.

The Post-Dispatch, in announcing this competition, used the following language:

"In order that the effort to increase the population of St. Louis to a million, in the shortest possible time, may be stimulated and that the co-operation of all the citizens may be invoked, the Post-Dispatch offers a prize of $500 for the best suggestion of ways and means to achieve this end."

"The competition is open to all. The award of the prize will be made by the Executive Committee of the Million Club, which is composed of the heads of all the business organizations in the city, or by a special committee designated by the Executive Committee of the Million Club."

"Suggestions must be sent to the Post-Dispatch, in the form of letters, not letter to exceed 200 words, addressed to the Editor of the Million Club. Only one suggestion should be contained in each letter. Competitors are invited to send as many letters as they choose."

Many writers have construed this to mean that a limitation of 200 words was vital to participation. Many others have inferred that the letter must not be limited to one idea. Most of the writers who have entered the competition have not defined or developed the "ways and means" of their suggestions. They have presented suggestions of varying value, but have not explained the practical application of the suggestion.

The members of the committee, having in view the excellent results thus far obtained and also desiring to give fuller opportunity for participation, ask the Post-Dispatch to reopen the competition. They suggest that the Post-Dispatch state the limitation of 200 words is not vital, although brevity will be important in the estimate of the merit, and further, that every letter should be confined to the elaboration of one idea or suggestion; however, there is no bar on the number of letters, each presenting a different idea, which any competitor may choose to write.

PROSECUTORS HURT CHARGES ATTEMPT TO FIX GRAND JURY AT PHILADELPHIA

District Attorney and Assistant, Both Suffer Broken Legs in Elevator Fall.

PHILADELPHIA, July 17.—District Attorney John C. Bell, Assistant City Solicitor Harry T. Kingston and William Bond of Collingswood, N. J., were seriously injured today by a fall in an elevator in the Land Title building, the highest building in the city.

Mr. Bell sustained a compound fracture of a leg. Mr. Kingston's legs both were fractured and Mr. Bond was injured about the body and received lacerations of the scalp.

District Attorney Bell and Assistant City Solicitor Kingston had been in conference in Mr. Bell's private office on the thirteenth floor of the building and were on their way to their offices in the City Hall, a block distant. The elevator operator, the only other occupant of the car, escaped with slight injury.

The elevator dropped from the fifth floor to the basement. The cause of the

ANGRY PARENTS WILL BURN NAME OF ELOPING GIRL

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 17.—Because their 17-year old daughter had abandoned her religion and married a Gentile, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Plesofsky, wealthy Russian Jews of this city, will burn the name of their daughter, now Mrs. A. Smith, the wife of a German, and she will be mourned as dead.

The girl eloped with Smith because, she says, she was persecuted at home, made to do all the drudgery when the family could well afford servants, and otherwise abused and mistreated.

Her mother learned of the issuance of a marriage license and attempted to prevent the ceremony, but the young couple, driven to desperation and pursued by the girl's relatives, were married by Rev. Stanley P. Mitchell, a negro preacher.

Mrs. Plesofsky later caused the arrest of her daughter, but as the marriage ceremony had been performed, the girl was released.

Immediately afterward the mother is alleged to have made a desperate effort to kill her offspring, grabbing her by the hair and throwing her about until she was rescued by the police.

"Four, so is dead, I might as well kill your body," she cried.

She then called upon heaven to send down fire to burn the body of the girl, as well as that of her husband.

Smith has known the girl for a year and is but 19 years of age.

He says he is able to take care of her and does not fear her parents. The latter are making threats against him and it may be necessary for the young couple to leave town.

Plesofsky and wife were about to depart for New York, when they learned that the "daughter-in-law" had eloped. It is said that they will now go into deep mourning, as if their daughter were really dead.

MOTHER FALLS DEAD PARTING FROM CHILD

Mrs. Kate M. Cleary, Talented Chicago Writer Succumbs to Heart Failure, When Forced by Divorced Husband to Give, Up Her Most Loved Boy.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Kate Cleary, the authoress, dropped dead yesterday afternoon when her husband took from her her most loved child.

Clutching her beloved "Teddy" in her arms, she fell on the threshold of her lonely lodgings in North Clark street. She staggered from the sick bed that had held her for two weeks and went to the street to beg her husband for her boy. She said she knew she was dying, and would be happy if "Teddy" could be near her.

The husband refused to let her keep her boy. There were hot words on the sidewalk. She pleaded for "Teddy" to go to his bed for the farewell. This was granted. The sick woman climbed back to the three flight of stairs to her squallid room, hand in hand with her "Teddy."

Her husband waited for the boy on the sidewalk.

At the door she bade her little boy farewell.

"Good-by, Teddy, darling," she cried. "Good-by, sweetheart." She tottered, clutched at the door and fell face forward on the threshold. In death she still clutched the little hand. The child fell upon her body, patting her face and crying.

The mother's broken heart, which had been writhing untold hours, had ceased beating. She was dead, and mother and child were clasped in an embrace, with the little fellow's chubby arms locked about her neck. When other lodgers rushed up "Teddy" ran down to the street where Cleary was waiting for him.

"Mamma fell down, come back and help her," he said to his father.

The husband never turned back to see his fallen wife.

He took "Teddy" and a daughter who was with him by the hands and pulled them along with him down the street. He went to his own separate home with the children and the dead mother's corpse was left to be cared for by strangers.

Mrs. Kate M. Cleary was one of the most talented women writers Chicago ever produced. She had been separated from her children for some time, but he occasionally brought the children to see her.

BLOWS BLINDED BUTCHER CHIEF

"Wrecking Crew" Meant to Kill Several Officers of the Amalgamated Union.

DONNELLY LAY AS DEAD

President Dold of Federation Sought, but Friends Gathered and Saved His Life.

CHICAGO, July 17.—It now appears that the "wrecking crew," which left for dead President Michael Donnelly of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters' and Butchers' Workmen of North America and probably caused the loss of his sight, intended to murder other officers of the union.

Donnelly was directly responsible for the repudiation of John C. Driscoll by the federation three years ago.

After breaking up the election, the sluggers made an attempt to get President Dold of the Federation, but were frightened away by the presence of friends of the labor leader.

The attack occurred at noon, two hours after the polls were opened, and at a time when the Bricklayers' Hall was deserted, except for the judges of election and the watchers and sergeant-at-arms.

Armed Men Guard Door.

Eight armed men guarded the stairs leading to the crowded saloon below. Meanwhile, seven armed men entered the hall and lined the judges of the election up in front of the ballot boxes under a sign of "having their blocks blown off" if they uttered a sound.

The sluggers then went carefully down the line, scrutinizing each man carefully and comparing him with a picture, evidently taken from a newspaper.

"These guys don't look like Donnelly," said one of the thugs. The judges were then packed in a small room, where two armed men mounted guard over them. The others waited until Donnelly came into the hall, when they set upon him and beat him until he was supposed to be dead. They then destroyed the ballots and escaped.

The union leaders also met at Bricklayers' Hall. When the members of this union left the hall last night a hundred nonunion men attacked them. The nonunionists were getting the worst of it, but the reinforcements were sent for their headquarters near by, and a general fight was soon in progress. Clubs and bricks were used and several shots were fired.

Biggest West of the Mississippi

The only St. Louis Newspaper with the Associated Press day dispatches.

There seems also to be some distance between Miles and Gen. Fred Grant.

It seems easier to find a preventive of tetanus
than a preventive of noise.

Possibly Mr. Jerome never dreamed of coming to the West as a Hiram Hindrance or a Col. Buttinsky.

The streets belong to the citizens, but not when they are in a crowded car behind a big wagon moving on the track just ahead.

THE MILLION POPULATION PRIZE.

As stated in the report of the special committee of the Million Club, published in Sunday's Post-Dispatch, the contest for the $500 prize offered by the Post-Dispatch for the best practical suggestion of ways and means to increase the population of St.
Louis to a million or more has been extended until the first of September.

The reasons given by the committee for this extension are that, while the contestants made many valuable suggestions, no concrete idea was developed by the writer into a practical plan which could be carried out by the Million Club or by the citizens of St. Louis. Many of the contestants appear to have misunderstood the terms and conditions of the contest, and none of the letters sent in complied with them in such a way as, in the opinion of the committee, entitled the writer to the prize.

The sole object of the contest being to bring out and develop the best idea, in a shape in which it could be acted upon, to promote the growth and increase the population of the city, the committee thought the contestants should be given another opportunity, and therefore requested the Post-Dispatch to continue the contest.

The renewed contest is open to all—to those who have contested and to others who may desire to enter the contest. It is particularly desired that contestants should read carefully the fuller and broader conditions under which the contest will be carried on, which will be found in the Sunday Post-Dispatch. Any further explanation will gladly be given.

This renewal of the contest is a call to all who desire the city's welfare to give their best thought to the subject. They are invited not merely to think, but to outline a practical plan showing how their suggestion can be put in effect. That is the essential factor in winning the $500 prize.

The election of Mr. Roosevelt to honorary membership in a British Association organized to prevent the overburdening of society with large families shows how greatly our President is esteemed abroad.

WANTED—A LITTLE ICE WATER.

The fact that a dozen thirsty jurors disagreed in a case because they were not supplied with ice water, and so reported to the Criminal Court of St. Louis, goes to prove that the poet had a long head when he wrote that "trifles make the sum of human things."

Since a new trial thus became necessary, it is plain to be seen that the lack of a bucket of ice water will cost the city a considerable sum—certainly as much as $100—besides two whole days of time for the judge, 12 other jurors, the Circuit Attorney and all other court officials, as well as the several witnesses.

It is said that a fly crawling across the face of a lense was the occasion of the invention of the telescope; the cackling of geese saved Rome; the neighing of his horse won the kingdom of Persia for the good Darius; hot weather hastened the signing of the Declaration of Independence—all these are trifles that worked for good. A little ice water would have been big money in St. Louis' pocket. Shall the feerman be installed as a court attache?

GREAT THOUGHT.

In a Fourth of July address before the National Teachers' Association Dr. W. T. Harris, United States
Commissioner of Education, said:

"The heart is the differentiated possibility of potentiality."

If the reader is appreciative, as of course he is,
he will know at once that a great idea has been snatched from the vast and formless infinite of no sense which is nonsense.

According to the philosophy of which Dr. Harris is the chief exponent in America, Being and Nothing are the same. Where there is no thing, there is the fullness of be-ness. Nothing is the Supreme Negation, a negation so supreme that it topples over and becomes, instead, the Supreme Affirmation.

Pursuing this thought, Dr. Harris identifies sense and nonsense, and cites the heart as an example. The greater the nonsense, the greater the sense until the Supreme is reached, when sense and no sense become one absolutely. The heart appears to be almost on the plane of the absolute, since "the differentiated possibility of potentiality" is almost absolute nonsense. Hence it is almost absolute wisdom.

It follows, then, that the heart being almost the absolute, is almost in the center of the universe, and for all practical purposes it is so, for only the very wise can calculate the parallax.

Does the reader complain that he sees no meaning in all this? Let him be comforted. Neither does the writer. But both may rejoice that they have touched the hem of the garment of a Great Thought.

The directors of the Merchants' Exchange believe that the time has come when concessions can be made to other countries without detriment to ourselves and with profit to all. And that is the McKinley idea, too.

ANTI-CORRUPTION SENTIMENT.

The disinclination on the part of the country juries to punish the St. Louis bidders which Circuit Attorney Sager says he has discovered and which he thinks indicates either public indifference to their punishment or public sympathy with their personal hardships, is probably due to mixed causes and motives. The struggle to convict the St. Louis bidders has been long and bitter and probably the juries think the bidders have paid a heavy penalty in loss of character and standing. The crimes are old and the character of the men supplying the testimony arouses repulsion and doubt in the minds of juries, and all of the cases have been handled for the defense with a view of exciting personal pity for the defendants and their families. More than this, the country people do not fully understand the crime or the methods of bribery as practiced in the cities.

Certainly Mr. Sager is right in the belief that there has been no abatement of public sentiment against official corruption. The evidence points to the general awakening of the people to a realization of the prevalence and of the enormity of the offense.
Mr. Sager is right in his resolution not to permit obstacles to the obtaining of convictions to discourage him, but to redouble the vigor of his prosecutions.
If public sentiment is wrong, it must be corrected.
Continued vigorous prosecution will be a warning to evildoers and to those who are tempted to do wrong. It will be an education for the public. The best campaign that can be waged against corruption is the prosecution of wrongdoers in courts where all the facts are brought to light with their relations to the law. The public awakening on the subject of official corruption was due in large measure to the bidders' prosecutions in this city and State.

LAWSON AND HOBSON.

Hobson says that Lawson's talks to the people are doing good. If Lawson could stop talking about himself and "the System" for a few moments he could doubtless return the compliment to Hobson.

Lawson is hammering "the System" with a 40-horsepower tongue and expects to get all the American people into the stock market under his leadership. He will personally conduct a bear raid which will enable the wage-earners to unload all of their railroad and trust stocks on the financial magnates and then buy them back for a few pennies, thus turning over and redistributing the stocks and reorganizing the industrial and commercial system
under the general management of Lawson.

Meanwhile Hobson has issued a proclamation of war against the railroads and is preparing to open fire with a 13-inch mouth, throwing an explosive projectile 10 miles.

Perhaps we can make a combination for the next presidential campaign of Lawson and Hobson, or of Hobson and Lawson. It is immaterial which shall lead the ticket, as the catastrophe will be the same.
We would then have a strenuous campaign of kissing and kissing which would attract the attention of the civilized world.

The Hottentots are doing their best to make it hot for the Germans.

PURE MILK AND CIVIC PRIDE.

All St. Louisians who are possessed of civic pride devote thought and action to the betterment of the city, in little things as well as great. They are anxious for its welfare, its growth and its honor.
They are proud of whatever tends to its advancement.

And they are equally anxious to abolish whatever evil exists that is capable of being abolished. They desire to diminish the causes of disease, to lower the death rate and to make life safer and happier for all the citizens.

As a practical work on these lines, nothing could be thought of which could do more good than the distribution of pure milk and free ice to the needy families of the crowded districts during the hot summer months. It has been proved that work of this kind prevents much disease and saves many lives. Every life saved may mean the addition of a useful citizen to the community. We desire to see the population increase, but if we neglect an opportunity to save the infants who are already a part of our population and to whom our first duty lies,
we are short-sighted, if not criminal.

In a broad sense, a city is a family, as well as a business corporation. The injury of one is the concern of all. Disease and death among the poor have an ill-effect upon all the members of the community.

The hot weather which has now commenced is likely to continue for a long time. It means suffering and an increase in the mortality in any event. But much of its effects can be prevented by supplying pure food to the young. A small sum contributed to the Pure Milk Fund will save life. The Post-Dispatch will be pleased to acknowledge all contributions to this best of charities.

Two young men strolled after them. The women turned the corner into Fountain place. They stopped before

BETWEEN Second street and the river in the central part of the city a large number of vacant stores and an equally large number of vacant lots where formerly big buildings had stood. Evidently the ground was no longer in sufficient demand to warrant the re-erection of buildings on the vacant spaces. Then it occurred to me that there was the very place for a Riverside Park, which would add materially to the attractions of the city, the elevated railroad passing along the river front to the contrary notwithstanding.

PRETTY girl coming down the aisle of the car. She jostled me, quite accidentally, in taking the other end of my seat, and apologized in a chirpy, sociable sort of way and we talked about nothing in particular while the car went a block or two. Then, because I was tired, I leaned back and closed my eyes. The girl wore a stork hat with a rough edge. Presently I unmistakably felt the edge of a straw hat pressing gently but insistently against my head above my right ear. What was the girl up to? Her head would be on my shoulder next. Had she fallen asleep? Of course everybody was looking. Planning a bolt, I opened my eyes slowly. The girl was in her place. The woman in the seat behind was tying her shoe. It was her hat.
Which goes to show how very misleading circumstantial evidence is.

ONE CONSOLATION.

By Clanahan.

When shall we ever find release
From heat that scorches old and young—
Heat that would melt "the Isles of Greece,"
Where burning Sappho loved and sung?
Oh, how shall ever we find peace,
Since thus our wretches have been wrong!

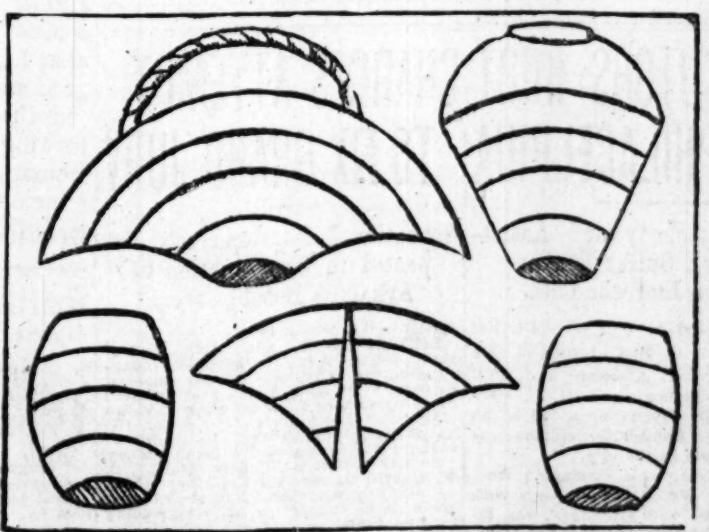

If this continues we will all

Or fade to shadows ere the fall
Shall come to cool the sizzling air.
The seashore? Nix! Not a tall!
It's twice as hot as this out there!

CHAPTER I. The Fortune Teller.

MADAME HINTON'S once beautiful face bore evidences of an emotional past. Her iron gray hair was concealed beneath a delicate mesh of lace that was not a hat or an old lady's cap. There was a touch of rouge on either cheek and on her lips; her eyebrows were penciled; her hands were delicately manicured. Her frame was large and her form was in other years well rounded, but now the emaciation of age marred her lines and her skin was nubby, of rough texture and yellow.

Only her eyes burned with undiminished brilliance, coal black, vital eyes; her jaws knew no laxity and her lips set firmly.

All was joy in her heart tonight. She laughed often, heartily, loudly. A guitar lay in her lap and its broad orange ribbon clattered against the dull pink of her cheap evening gown. There were diamonds in her ears and a brooch gleamed at her neck. She plunked the strings accompanying Jim Loftus' mandolin, and Hazel, his wife, sang.

On the round marble top table were bottles of beer, some empty and some in course of exhaustion. There were no glasses. Only Jim drank and between songs. Then he would set the bottle against his lips and the liquid would gurgle into his mouth until Hazel, crying, "You'll kill yourself!" struck it down.

Occasionally he lighted a cigarette, inhaled for a few moments and when a third of the paper stick was burned, he flung it into the empty grate.

There was that in Mme. Hinton's manner which indicated the first exhilaration of drunkenness. She swayed her head with the music, beat time loudly with her foot when the air was vivacious and sometimes she sang a phrase in a thin, high, affected soprano and a brooch gleamed at her neck. She plunked the strings accompanying Jim Loftus' mandolin, and Hazel, his wife, sang.

Hazel Loftus was amiable and sang whatever they demanded, but in the intervals she watched her husband closely or glanced with narrowed, disapproving eyes at the old fortune teller. Market and Laclede cars rattling by the door sometimes drowned conversation, but the music always rose above the sound of the cars.

"I'm dry," said Jim, leaning forward for a half empty bottle of beer.

Hazel snatched it away, saying, "You've drunk enough."

"Let him have it," said Madame Hinton. "Let him celebrate. Take a little yourself. It'll give you an appetite."

Hazel shuddered and tossed the bottle into the grate, where it clattered unbroken and gushing its contents on the waste paper and cigarette butts.

Loftus and the fortune teller laughed boisterously. The Madame took advantage of Hazel's momentary abstraction and passed a bottle to Loftus. They laughed again over Hazel's discomfiture when she discovered him drinking and she laughed with them.

"Be a sport, Hazel," said Jim. "Smoke a cigarette."

He tossed his pack into her lap and she lighted one with awkward fingers and choked when she tried to inhale the smoke.

"Is he good for anything more?" Loftus asked the Madame.

"Who? The cattleman? No, I don't think he'll come back for a while. That is unless his luck has a quick turn. Then he'll say the dried pigtail did the business. But he isn't a lucky man. He ought to stick to his cattle buying and let speculation alone. I warned him the first time he came, but Voodoo Jim told him I could give him luck and he didn't mind paying fifteen hundred for a charm. When he finds it won't work for him he'll want to kill me, but he'll feel so ashamed of himself he'll never come back. That's the way with all of them."

"You soaked the money in the bank?" asked Loftus, carelessly.

"Don't you worry about what I did with it. I stashed it all right. You got your rent money and a bit to eat on and that's all you're going to get."

Madame Hinton's words were rude and insulting, but her tone was friendly and her laugh was genial.

"Oh I ain't after the dough," Loftus hastened to say. His wife rose hurriedly and walked to the mantel to hide her face, on which a strong emotion was visible. She searched aimlessly for something, turning over little ornaments that rattled on the yellow marble.

"Sit down, Hazel," Loftus commanded. "You're restless as a cat."

"I'm sick of this," she said intensely. "Fiddlesticks!" commented the Madame.

"I'm sick of it, I tell you," Mrs. Loftus faced her husband and their visitor. "What sort of life have we had since I ran away with you, Jim Loftus? You told me you'd make me a queen, that I'd have all the beautiful dresses I wanted, that you'd put me on the stage, where I'd make a great hit, and what came of it all? Here we are in this one miserable, dirty room without an engagement, and if the Madame hadn't robbed a poor, innocent old German and given us some of the stolen money we wouldn't have even this beastly room to sleep in or anything to eat. And you sit here quietly swilling beer and smoking your nasty cigarettes and don't care. I tell you I'm sick of it."

"Well," said Madame Hinton, and her voice was hard as her eyes were cold, "why don't you go home to mamma?"

Hazel Loftus took a step toward the old woman, her hands clenched, her mouth tense and her eyes glittering. "I could kill you," she gasped. "When ever I try to work Jim up to being a man you slip him money for drink and encourage him in his horrid ways. You make him take that engagement in that dirty place where the men insult me all the time, and Jim—he hasn't enough respect for me or himself left to resent it. You're a vile woman."

She paused breathless and then again came that snap of rage:

"I could kill you."

A loud knock on the door startled all. Madame Hinton, carrying the guitar by its orange ribbon, answered the knock.

A tall girl stood in the doorway, blond tressed, black eyed, beautiful. She was gowned exquisitely and out of keeping with this poor, old house and the decayed neighborhood.

"Lora!" Mme. Hinton breathed the name and cast a frightened glance at the couple in the room. They were staring openly amazed at the lovely girl in the doorway.

"Come," said the girl. "I want you to go with me immediately."

"Where?" asked the Madame and not awaiting an answer. "It's too late. I never go out at night. Certainly not so late."

"It's only 9 o'clock," said the girl,

"and I want you." There was a menace in her last words.

Mme. Hinton went out into the hall and closed the door.

Jim and Hazel heard her continue to expostulate, but if the girl answered they could not hear her voice.

Presently Mme. Hinton looked in on them, bonneted and cloaked. "I'm going out for a few minutes. I'll bring some sandwiches when I come back."

"Can it while you're young," cried Loftus. "Who's your friend?"

But the door was closed. They heard the front door slam and Hazel from the shelter of curtains saw the fortune teller and her fair visitor enter a carriage at the curb.

"Who can it be?" she said, all her anger gone.

"Search me," her husband answered when shortness of breath compelled him to take the bottle from his lips. "Some dame that wants luck brought to her, I guess."

"No, no. That can't be it. She's not that kind. Did you hear her bosey tone? Madame was afraid of her. You know I think they look alike a little bit. What if that was Madame's daughter? She has just the same sort of black snake eyes and her voice—did you notice her voice? It was like Joe. Just Madame's voice when she's angry."

Loftus lifted his voice in a maudlin song. "The Love That Never Grows Old," tinkling an accompaniment on the mandolin. His wife prepared for bed, letting down the davenport and fetching pillows and blankets from a walnut wardrobe in the corner.

The davenport was against the sliding doors separating the Loftus apartment or front parlor from Mme. Hinton's room—the back parlor. The knobs on these doors were broken, but a rope was looped over their shanks, serving as a lock. Hazel unwound this rope and slid the doors back.

A lamp was burning brightly on the mantel in the Madame's room. A plain iron bed that had not been made up that day, a troway plush rocker, a straight back chair and two old trunks were covered with cowskin from which the hair had been worn in great patches and a walnut wardrobe identical with that in the front room completed the visible furniture.

The trunks were bound with ropes and straps.

Mrs. Loftus climbed over the davenport and entered the other room.

"Come back here," called her husband.

"You shut up. I want to see something," she answered.

She felt about the bed aimlessly, looked under the pillows and the mattress. Then she searched about in the corners at the bottom of the wardrobe and in the spaces along the wall not occupied by furniture. She felt under the wardrobe and under the bed.

"What are you looking for?" said Jim from the door.

"I'm looking for her diamonds. She took them off while she was getting her cloak and hat. Didn't you see she didn't have them on when she came back? She didn't have time to hide them, and I'd like to find them and give her a good scare. She'd be on to us in a minute, and it would be the pen, for one or both of us."

"I'd give them back. I just want to scare her, but I can't find them. She must have a secret place."

He climbed over the davenport again Jim looked at her steadily.

"That's funny line for you to take," he said, puzzled by her unaccountable performance. He was too drunk to notice how white she was and how queerly she looked at him.

She slid the doors together and rove the rope over the shanks of the broken knobs.

"What are you doing there?" asked Madame Hinton behind her. She had entered the Loftus room unobserved and stood close to Mrs. Loftus glaring at her.

Hazel jumped guiltily. "Oh, Madame, how you frightened me. Why, the rope was loose and I was using it up."

Mme. Hinton shook her head playfully, and even Jim saw that the diamonds were in her ears and the brooch glittered at her neck.

"I'm afraid you're after my fifteen hundred," she said.

Rumors & Dissension—Only One Race Sunday, Acci-

Friends of the North St. Louis Gentlemen's Diving Club are striving to account for the lack of interest evinced in the matinee of the club held during the past few weeks. Rumors are afloat that there is dissension brewing in the club, while there may be the hot weather is responsible for the small fields in the different events. It is possible that the club may be reorganized in the near future to settle the difficulty. The stories have been heard with dismay by the manx.

There was but one contest Sunday afternoon, this being the 3:00 trot or pace. Freund's Rye, driven by her owner, M. Freund, proved to be the winner, annexing the first two heats. Jane Ischoltz furnished some splendid competition.

John S. McQuay sent Julia Hudson's fast mile in 1:39, the little pacer finished in 1:40. The 1:35 pacer was declared. Originally there were five horses entered in the race, but two were absent. The one who was absent to the running gear of one of them. The withdrawal of the other two horses necessitated the postponement of the event.

There will be a matinee at the track next Sunday. The Breese Club will hold a matinee on that day and many of the members of the local club will enter their horses at the Breese meeting.

FOUGHT DUEL IN THE STREET; ONE IS DYING

Ira Ferguson and Edward Tully Fired Several Shots at Each Other After Quarrel in Saloon in Venice.

ONE IS NOW IN JAIL, THE OTHER IN HOSPITAL

Duelists Had Quarrelled Frequently About Wife of One of Them—Last Quarrel Started
by Man Who Called Tully Names.

Ira Ferguson, 24 years old, of Madison is at St. Mary's Hospital in East St.
Louis, and is believed to be fatally injured. Edward Tully, 26 years old, of Brooklyn, is locked up at Venice jail.

The men fought a duel with revolvers in Venice Saturday night. It was the culmination of repeated quarrels.
The two men had been in the habit of attending a moving picture exhibition operated in connection with Fred Lewis saloon, on State street, called the Sun-glow.

Tully recently separated from his wife,
Tully says that since the separation he and Ferguson had quarrelled every time they met, sometimes at the Sun-glow and sometimes at other places, and that once Ferguson had drawn a knife on him and at another time had drawn a revolver.

Ferguson then, according to Tully, impudently accepted responsibility for his friend's action by running out of the saloon. Tully ran out after him. Tully says Ferguson stopped at the opposite side of the street and turned and fired at him. He exhibited a bruise on his right shoulderblade and says it is where Ferguson's bullet struck him.

Tully fired one shot, and Ferguson, he says, fired another. Tully advanced to the middle of the street and fired at Ferguson. Ferguson fired back, and a bullet struck him below the heart and passed through his body, coming out above his hip.

Tully went to the front door and began shooting in the air, he says, to attract the police. Tully thought he was shooting at him and Ferguson, who was driving him back into the saloon.

Tully went to his home in Brooklyn and was arrested there at midnight. He was locked up at Venice. Ferguson was handed over to the police. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, where the physicians say his prospects for recovery are very slight.

COURT DISOLVES LEWIS RECEIVERSHIP

In the case. In no part of the State's petition was it alleged that the Lewis Bank was insolvent.

Immediately after announcing his decision from the bench, Judge McElhinney directed the Sheriff to notify Receiver Spencer, who was not present in court.

Spencer's attorneys, Senator Gardner and former Judge Wolff, were in court and were greatly surprised by the court's action. They declined to discuss it.

THOUSANDS OF LETTERS AWAIT LEWIS FRAUD ORDER DECISION

It is expected that Judge McElhinney, in the United States Circuit Court, will finally decide Tuesday on the application of E. G. Lewis for an injunction against enforcement of the fraud order which for a week has prevented delivery of mail addressed to the People's United States Bank or any of its offices.

The local postoffice officials hope there will be no delay in the decision, because the interrupted mail is assuming huge proportions. There are letters 20 feet deep in the cashier's vault where they are being kept for safety pending the decision on the injunction, and it is expected that by Tuesday morning the number of the letters will reach 8000.

Hundreds of these letters are addressed to "E. G. Lewis, President Woman's Magazine," and are marked "Special Delivery." They are intended for the bank, but they are being held under the general terms of the fraud order.

Hundreds of letters are addressed by women, and come from cities and regions postoffices all over the nation. These letters are especially scrutinized; for the wife of the promoter is visiting out of the city, and the postoffice officials are eager to deliver any letter she may write, but they say it is practically impossible for them to distinguish between a letter from Mrs. Lewis and one from a customer of the bank. An estimate based on the advice received is that the letters contain between $500 and $800 in money orders. Many of them show, by their bulk, that they contain bank pass books, and it is presumed cash for deposit is with them.

If Judge McElhinney grants the injunction, these letters will be turned over to Lewis; if the injunction is refused, the letters and postoffice money orders will be at once returned to the writers.

SWANEE RCONTERS WITH ATTY-GENERAL

Special Attorney General, J. Edgar Hoover, is expected to visit St. Louis, Mo., July 17. When Secretary of State Swann was informed by a Post-Dispatch reporter of Judge McElhinney's decision dissolving the Lewis bank receivership, he hurried to St. Louis to see the attorney general.

When asked for a statement concerning the action of the court, Mr. Hadley said he could have nothing to say until he had more definite information concerning the decision.

FINGER PRINTS REVEAL IDENTITY

Scotland Yard Detectives
Write Desmond Career of Man Arrested Here.

Capt. Pearson Recognized There by Identification Mark Sent From St. Louis.

The first case on record of a Scotland Yard identification of an Englishman arrested in the United States by means of the thumb-and-finger-print system so favored by British detectives developed in St. Louis Monday.

The man identified, according to the police, is Capt. John Pearson, who resented himself to be a former officer of the "Queen's Horse Guards," and introducing himself to Insurance Agent Caw of St. Louis as a nephew of President Klondike, London Insurance Co., borrowed a small sum of money on the strength of that alleged relationship.

Pearson was acquitted of disturbing the peace in City Hall Police Court, but before he was released the police took his Bertillon measurements, photographed him and took a print of his thumb and fingers according to the English system.

The thumb-and-finger print was sent by Chief Detectives Desmond to Scotland Yard, and Monday Chief Desmond received in reply an identification of Pearson, together with a photograph, which he and Bertillon Superintendent John Shoen say they recognized as that of Pearson, although the man wore a beard when the picture was taken and was smooth shaven when in St. Louis.

The Scotland Yard authorities write that Capt. John Pearson had been identified by his thumb and finger prints as John Pearson Walker, also known as John Chalmers Waring and John George.

He left England in 1891 and had not been heard from since that time until the St. Louis thumb and finger prints were received.

Chief Desmond says that St. Louis was the first American city to adopt this system, this being done Oct. 28, at Louisville, Ky. He says that the thumb-and-finger prints of about 700 men. He is encouraged to believe that the system is a sound one, but says that for his collection to be of value as a means of identification, the list of prints must be increased to about 100,000.

FUDGED AT MARBLES; IS CUT

Because Andy Heineman "fudged" when Willie Jones had "snooks" was the beginning of a serious cutting between two playmates Sunday afternoon. The two boys were playing marbles and a quarrel ensued after a dispute over which boy's "taugh" was in possession of the ring. Andy Heineman, who was the more skillful player, had snooked his marble up to a better position near the ring. Willie Jones accused him of fudging, and cut his companion with a knife.

Heineman was confined to his home at 263 D. Kalb street with painful injuries. Both boys are 14 years of age.

and $2,000,000 and no questions asked," College Professor Wires.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Andrew N. Wires D. is quite a hero in Chicago. He is a hero out of a job. He is professor of Biblical languages in the Chicago Theological Seminary. One day he sent this telegram:

D. Rockefeller, New York City, N. Y.—Wanted—Two professional endowments desired missionary work at home. Eleven lives touched. Check accepted on face No questions asked.

ANDREW N. WIRES, PH. D., Professor Biblical Languages in German Institute, Chicago Theological Seminary.

Prof. Wires waited and waited, but simply came from the oil kings. He was not ignored entirely. He heard the message, at least indirectly, and told he was not to be repeated. When he asked why the message was quoted.

He treasury which has been given does not seem a very suitable reward for the 11 years of work I have to the seminary," Prof. Wires said.

As far as my telegram is concerned, I have sent it from the best motives. I mean it simply because the Seminary and the German Institute need it in the very worst way, and because I had been asked to solicit money for the work of the institution.

But I have been asked to get money particularly from the German bankers, yet it seemed to me that Rockefeller might properly be approached.

Spread to Beneficiaries.

Money, Rockefeller's, or anyone else's can be said to be tainted, then the students who have been taught by him also, I, for instance, am a graduate of the University of Chicago. If the institution is tainted, my education, my scholarship, my teaching ability, my knowledge, my character, my life, are tainted, too.

But I have been imparting my knowledge in the years I have been a professor at the Chicago Theological Seminary, and the scores of students who have been taught by me have become tainted in turn. I have been spreading the taint of Rockefeller's money throughout the United States, wherever they go they spread the enduring taint of Rockefeller's money.

In this reasoning the whole nation is tainted, and this is the result of the reduction from the theory of taintment. Does not the so-called tainted money through it become a real absurdum?"

MISSOURI RIVER CHANGES

Channel at Omaha and Endangers Illinois Central R. R. Bridge.

At the Post-Dispatch, July 17.—The Missouri has at last changed its channel the big Illinois Central Railroad at this place and it will be a serious matter for the railroad to draw from the Nebraska to the side of the stream. Where there 50 feet of water two weeks ago is scarcely three feet, and on the side of the stream, where has for years been only a shallow and flat Missouri is now 40 feet deep. The change during the flood of the week, and was discovered today the pilot of the steamer Gunner showed that the river had managed to pass beneath the bridge and draw open.

It is one of the largest double-track railroad bridges in the world, as it has been rebuilt at a cost of more than a million dollars.

LAMONT, N. Y., July 17.—The United States Department of Agriculture says he has conclusively demonstrated that ripe fruit, well ripened before shipment, will arrive under ordinary railroad refrigerator service being ten to fifteen miles.

TROOPS AT JAIL GREET ANGRY MOB

Six Negroes Charged With Assaulting and Killing White Widow Narrowly Escape.

JUDGE MAKES AN APPEAL

Bruised Nude Body of Mrs. James Smith Found in Bushes, Neck Broken.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 17.—Company C of the State troops and speechless by Representative Burnette and Judge Disque were needed to keep a mob of one hundred men from breaking into the jail at Gadsden and lynching six negroes, charged with murdering, after repeatedly assaulting, Mrs. James Smith, a white widow.

The negroes in the Gadsden jail are Vance Gardner, William Johnson, E. D. Johnson, Bud Richardson, Jefferson Alford and Frankie Mayo.

The crime was committed Saturday night. Early Sunday Vance Gardner reported discovering the woman's dead body.

The police found her nude, lying partly concealed in some bushes on the roadside, three-quarters of a mile from Gadsden. Mrs. Smith had been attacked on the roadside, and after having been repeatedly assaulted, was dragged by her hair down an embankment, over rocks and stumps, into a clump of bushes, where she was left after efforts had been made to conceal her body. Her neck was broken. A pair of scissors and a case knife, found close to her body, evidently aided her in the struggle.

When a mob of three hundred gathered Sheriff Chandler wired to the Governor for military aid and got it.

CARBOLIC ACID TOO HOT.

Mrs. Moeller Changes Suicide Intention After Testing Drug.

Mrs. Theresa Moeller, 30 years old, lost her nerve when the first drops of carboloid acid which she was taking to end her life burned her lips and tongue. "So hot, so hot," she cried as she ran to the home of a neighbor, who gave her an emetic for the drop or two she had swallowed. "I won't use carboloid acid the next time I try to die," she told City Hospital physicians. "why, it almost killed me, it burned so."

The bonds are in three safes, which were removed from the Commercial Building Saturday afternoon with the intention of holding them to the new quarters of the Colonial Security Co. before night, but it was found impossible to do so and they had to be left in the alley. POST-DISPATCH NEWSBOYS NO. 10.

ADOLPH KAHN, 321 California Av.

Everybody knows of the industry and progressiveness of the South Side merchants. It is therefore to be expected that the Post-Dispatch news merchants should be dominated by this same spirit of enterprise.

Ordinarily, however, one would hardly expect a lad of 12 years to be earning a profit of $8 a week. Nevertheless, Adolph Kahn, 12 years of age, Post-Dispatch newsboy, does this very thing. Adolph gets his supply at Joe Walters' Post-Dispatch branch, 2817 Gravois avenue. He "holds down" the corner at Cherokee and California avenues when he is not supplying the patrons in the cars of the United Railways. Having by hereditary the natural instincts for business, Adolph is steadily climbing.

He realizes that there is a natural demand on the part of the reading public for the Post-Dispatch, and, having the goods the people want, he industriously and successfully sells the Post-Dispatch to the maximum number that he can personally reach.

Adolph is an example of what newsboys who want to make money selling the Post-Dispatch may do. Mr. Walters will be glad to talk to newsboys at his branch, 2817 Gravois avenue.

Walter Baker & Co. Win Suit.
The United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York has just rendered a decision favorable to the plaintiff in the suit brought by Walter Baker & Co., Limited, against another concern to enjoin the latter from using as a trademark a full-length figure of a girl dressed in Puritan costume, because it infringed the plaintiff's well-known trademark of the Chocolate Girl.—Boston Evening Transcript, July 12.

GIVES CITY BLACK EYE.

Boy Whose Fortune of $3 Is Purloined Loses Faith.

The theft of his entire fortune, $3, so discouraged Henry Embausen, a 15-year-old boy who came Saturday from his home in Edwardsville, Ill., to make his fortune in the city, that he appeared at the Central District Station early Monday morning and asked for car fare home.

He said his mother had given him the money and that he had hoped to make a fortune until the perjury of his friend made him feel that he couldn't trust anyone in the city. Sgt. Louis Noite gave him the required amount, 25 cents, and also a lecture on being too easily discouraged.

In our judgment these refrigerators, from every point of view, surpass anything in the line of ice boxes ever offered the public.

McCrays Refrigerators,

Wood lined, glass and tile-lined, ARE HEALTHFUL, because no poisonous oxide from corroding zinc can be formed. ARE ODOORLESS, because the perfect circulation of pure, DRY and cold air will not allow the walls to get wet and mouldy. ARE ECONOMICAL, because this circulation, due to our improved system of construction and insulation, uses the least ice.
